Organiser's Thanks and Comments:

Thanks to the helpers who made the event happen: Judith, Christian and Andy Wood, Richard Catlow, John and Helen Ashton plus the Ellis family. It was much appreciated.

Hope you enjoyed the event, particularly any newcomers. Another decent turnout for the area with 51 runners out on the night with about 1/3 being non-regulars.

Helmsore is different to the majority of other street-o areas (Ramsbottom excepted!) due to the physical nature of the terrain and the size of the area. I deliberately made the penalties not too harsh to encourage people to explore the area more. Also tried to distribute the points round the map so it was possible to score at a similar rate per km, regardless of running pace, but with quite a few controls positioned to 'distract' top runners from going directly to the west of the map. As expected, nobody came close to getting them all, but Quentin's score of 1310 was impressive. It took me 2 hours to check all the controls on my mountain bike in daytime. For those interested, the two SW-most controls (35 & 61) remained unvisited.

Problem Controls

8 controls had errors or queries; most can be traced to typos or misreads. Only 47 had more than one error, with 2 getting it wrong. This was a telegraph pole that was high and difficult to read. Most people got it OK but I have allowed anything close to the correct answer. 24 was commented on as being a tricky control but only one person got it wrong (38/46 teams visited it ok), so have let it stand. In hindsight it maybe was not a brilliant control site, as there were alternatives nearby. Bang goes the theory that substations are controversy-free control sites...
